

Winterizing the Pallet Feeder

My plan was to put trees on the east side to block the wind but procrastination forced me to improvise before the Nor'easter hit yesterday. Two pallets with more boards on them served the purpose.

The feeder was well stocked with food before the storm. This was the first real test. I was hoping that the birds would have access after the storm so I wouldn't have to go out and dig it out. It appears to have worked.

However there was some buildup of snow near the openings on the east side. A larger pallet may prevent this.

During the Storm

After the Storm

